ATTENDING VETERINARIAN AND ADEQUATE VETERINARY CARE (DEALERS AND EXHIBITORS).

There is an 80lb sow that has an injury to her left rear leg that prevents her from being able to put any weight on it, to the point where she drags it to the side of her body when she tries to walk. The sow has been isolated in its own pen for at least one week, however the veterinarian has not been contacted and no treatment or action has been taken to address the obvious health issue. In the 'Grower' side of the finishing barn there is another 80lb female that has an abscess approximately 8 inches in diameter, with a slightly purple color and tight in appearance located on the underside of her left jaw, which was not observed until during the inspection. At this time the veterinarian has not been contacted in regards to these two health issues, and no treatments have been given.

Any health issue that is left untreated can cause unnecessary pain and discomfort to the regulated animals. The lack of response can cause a treatable condition to become chronic or fatal if left undiagnosed and treated for long periods of time depending on the original condition.

The veterinarian must be contacted to properly diagnose and treat any condition that is required. The licensee must make sure all conditions are treated according to the veterinarians directions and procedures at all facilities.

This abscess has a slightly purple color to it and is quite large and tight in appearance. The condition of this sow had not been observed until during the inspection, where she was then moved to an isolation pen. At this time both conditions had not been observed until during the inspection, resulting in the veterinarian not being contacted or any treatments being provided.

It is important that complete daily observations be conducted of all regulated animals in order to identify any health issues that appear, in order to prevent any unnecessary pain or discomfort.

The licensee must conduct thorough daily observations of all animals to assess their health and well being. A mechanism of direct and frequent communication is required so that timely and accurate information on problems of animal health, behavior, and well-being is conveyed to the attending veterinarian.
