ATTENDING VETERINARIAN AND ADEQUATE VETERINARY CARE (DEALERS AND EXHIBITORS).

A goat at the facility has an area on its front right shoulder about an inch in diameter that is raised and hairless. When the animal caretaker evaluated it and put light pressure on it a thick white discharge came out of it. These are signs of an infection/abscess which can be caused by many different things. Such condition can sometimes be painful for an animal and can potentially be spread to other animals in the enclosure. To maintain good health of this goat and those around it a veterinarian must examine it and his/her recommended treatment(s) must be followed.

Daily observation of all animals...

A goat has a raised hairless area on its front shoulder that has signs of an infection/abscess in it (a pale discharge was present). The facility was not aware of this condition on the goat until I pointed it out to the animal caretaker. Thorough daily observations of animals must be completed by the facility so that any abnormal health condition may be promptly recognized and reported to the attending veterinarian. Develop and maintain a routine of observing animals daily and report any abnormal conditions promptly to the attending veterinarian.

Correct by 10/16/2015.

Exit interview conducted with facility representative.
