3.127(c)

Facilities, outdoor.

-Approximately eighty percent of the ground within the outdoor area of the enclosure containing 33 goats and 1 alpaca was filled with mud and standing water. There were food receptacles along the outdoor portion of the fence that were sitting in the mud.

- There was a muddy area in the area where the two zebu and two goats had to walk to move from their indoor to their outdoor enclosure areas. There was also mud along the east fence of the outdoor enclosure. The muddy area was taking about about 20 percent of the outdoor portion of the enclosure.

Having a dry resting area and way to walk to food, water, and shelter without walking through standing water for animals is necessary for their comfort and their ability to access needed resources.

A suitable method to rapidly eliminate excess water must be provided. The method of drainage shall comply with local, state, and federal laws and regulations relating to pollution control or the protection of the environment.
