Requirements and application.

On January 8, 2025, a USDA registered research facility bought 15 silver foxes from Mr. Krage. In a phone conversation with the inspector, Mr. Krage confirmed that the research facility asked him to help them buy foxes for a study and that he purchased the foxes from a breeder in Nebraska and then sold and delivered them to the research facility. Brokering the sale of wild mammals like foxes to a USDA registered research facility is an activity that requires a valid license under the Animal Welfare Act. A license must be obtained prior to conducting further regulated activity

An exit briefing was completed with a facility representative.
