Sanitation.

Many rabbit droppings are on the ground and in fallen hay next to the bales stored on pallets. The feedstuff is intended for consumption by the camels. A wild rabbit was observed outside of the outdoor food storage facility during inspection. A facility representative stated there is no current pest control program for rabbits, but there is one for rodents. Failure to have an active program to control mammalian pests may result in disease transmission and thus illness in animals. A safe and effective program for the control of insects, ectoparasites, and avian and mammalian pests shall be established and maintained.

Correct by 22 November 2024.

This inspection and exit interview were conducted with the facility representatives.
