3.84(a) REPEAT

CLEANING, SANITIZATION, HOUSEKEEPING, AND PEST CONTROL.

 The indoor resting perch for the female baboon is dirty and smeared with feces. Also, the outdoor lemur enclosure floor has an excessive accumulation of feces that must be removed and the area cleaned. These surfaces must be kept clean, replaced when needed, and spot cleaned as needed to reduce disease potential. Failure to properly clean surfaces in contact with the animals exposes them to potential diseases and parasites. Correct this by maintaining these surfaces and cleaning on a more frequent basis.

3.131(a) REPEAT

SANITATION.

 Several enclosures require cleaning to reduce disease hazards to the animals. The enclosure containing the wolf and wolf hybrid, the enclosure containing the 2 red fox, and the enclosure containing the brown bear cub have plastic igloo shelters that are covered with dirt and grime. Additionally the enclosure containing the 3 adult black bears has an accumulation of feces and spent food items including bread on the ground that requires cleaning.

 All of these enclosures must be cleaned and maintained on a more frequent basis to ensure the animals can remain clean and to reduce disease hazards. Additionally, spent food must be removed on a regular basis to deter potential rodent problems, especially due to the fact that evidence of rodents was found during this inspection.

Inspection Report

 Rodent holes continue to be found on the premises. Today, recent rodent holes were found near the perimeter fence by the red fox enclosures. There are rodent bait boxes being used in this area however the current program must be improved to ensure the control of these mammalian pests. This is required to reduce disease hazards to the regulated animals on the premises.
