3.50(a)

Facilities, general.

The shelter building, housing 8 rabbits, has wood trim on exterior of shelter that is in disrepair. The trim on the far left is severely rotted in two places at the base. The trim to the right, nearest the entrance into the shelter, is missing an approximately 3" section of wood where it no longer meet the floor. The missing piece and the rotted trim leave the shelter building in disrepair and it can allow access of unwanted rodents into the rabbit housing area. This damaged trim shall be repaired so that it is structurally sound, maintained in good repair and to restrict the entrance of other animals.

Facilities, general.

There is a quarter sized hole in the drywall above an outlet, directly behind a chinchilla enclosure. This hole could allow the entrance of mice into the room housing the exhibit animals and mice could spread disease to the animals housed therein. The wiring in this outlet is subject to chewing by mice. Based on the soiling around this opening, it appears that it is utilized by vermin. This opening should be appropriately repaired to prevent the entrance of rodents; prevent electrical situations; and to ensure the structural strength of this wall.

3.125(c)

Facilities, general.

An open bag of pine shavings was present the exhibit animal room. Since mice are able to gain entrance into the animal housing room, this open bag of shavings is subject to contamination. Supplies of food and bedding shall be stored in facilities which adequately protect such supplies against deterioration, molding, or contamination by vermin.
