ATTENDING VETERINARIAN AND ADEQUATE VETERINARY CARE (DEALERS AND EXHIBITORS).

 A Female Shih Tzu (#148) had lesions under her neck. The underside of this dog's neck had an area approximately 3 inches long and 1.5 inches wide that had an area of reddened skin, lesions and scabs. After this dog was pointed out and caught, the facility representative said they had treated this dog for neck problems, but was not under any current treatment and didn't have any documentation of prior treatment. The condition of this dog could indicate an injury, illness or other veterinary medical condition which may be uncomfortable. The licensee must consult a licensed veterinarian in order to ensure that an accurate diagnosis is made and that an appropriate treatment plan is developed and followed. The licensee must document this information and make it available to the inspector upon request. The licensee must ensure that all animals receive adequate veterinary care at all times.

The facility as had four transfer bottles that were not properly labeled. The facility was using old medicine bottles for transfer bottles, with no product name or expiration date of what was in the bottles. Some of the other bottles did had a product name wrote on the bottle but no expiration date. These medications were stored with other medications that were currently being used, and therefore ready to use. Expired medication may not work as anticipated, could become contaminated or harm the animals. Usage of medications that are not properly labeled may harm the animals. Licensee must establish and maintain a program that ensures medications are not used past their labeled expiration date and ensure all transfer bottles are labeled correctly.

The veterinary care for Yorkie (108) and male Maltese (no ID) from the 10/28/2014 report have been addressed.
