Environment enhancement to promote psychological well-being.

The facility currently exhibits three chickens and a single housed turkey but does not have an environmental enhancement plan to promote psychological well-being of birds. A multifaceted enhancement plan for birds is instrumental for their well-being as a means to address their needs to express species-typical behavior and promote overall psychological well-being. Environmental enhancement plans must address all species needs specific to social grouping, environmental enrichment, and special considerations (i.e. housing nestlings, chicks or fledglings; birds showing signs of psychological distress through behavior or appearance; birds requiring restricted activity; and individually housed birds unable to see and hear birds of their own or compatible species).

Correct by October 2, 2024 by developing an environmental enhancement plan for birds as directed by the attending veterinarian and in accordance with currently accepted professional standards.

This inspection and exit interview were conducted with a facility representative.
