2.131(b)(1)

Handling of animals.

Recently an employee sustained a bite injury from a coatimundi at the facility. Upon a discussion with personnel it was determined that facility procedures had not been followed and the employee entered the enclosure without securing the animal in the lock out. It was noted that the employee had been previously trained in the correct safety procedures. Entering an enclosure with an animal could cause it to bite due to being stressed. Animals must be handled in such a manner so as to minimize distress. The facility conducted retraining of employees on safety procedures, and only authorized personnel will tend to certain species of animals in an effort to handle the animals in the least stressful manner possible.
