Handling of animals.

During the auction, on October 8, 2021, the wallaby and coatimundi were not handled in a manner that would minimize stress and discomfort. Both animals exhibited signs of stress when being taken into the auction ring. The coatimundi became aggressive upon removal from its enclosure. Animals shall be handled in a manner that reduces or minimizes their stress or discomfort.

3.125(a)

Facilities, general.

The panels used as walls for the enclosure housing the oryx were not adequately secured, creating an enclosure that was not structurally sound, which may allow the oryx to become injured should they fall. The enclosures must be constructed of appropriate materials and strength for the animals housed within.
