3.28(a)(1)

Primary enclosures.

The enclosure that houses two guinea pigs has two wooden housing structures that have damaged wood. One structure has chewed wood around the entrance and the other has a section of the top missing on the edge. Additionally, this structure had an obvious liquid stain on the top. Both of these structures are in disrepair and are not substantially impervious to moisture. Damaged wooden structures and surfaces that absorb moisture cannot be appropriately sanitized. These damaged structures should be repaired or replaced in order for them to be structurally sound and substantially impervious to moisture. Enclosures, including their racks, shelving and other accessories, shall be constructed of smooth material substantially impervious to liquids and moisture.
