2.40(b)(2)

ATTENDING VETERINARIAN AND ADEQUATE VETERINARY CARE (DEALERS AND EXHIBITORS).

A wolf, Anubis, was observed having difficulty walking and standing which may be due to long nails. The visible skin on his paws appears red and irritated. The licensee has stated that the wolf is difficult to handle without sedation and she has asked for assistance from her attending veterinarian, however, at this time there is no recent written documentation available to show the condition is being addressed by the veterinarian. In April 2014 the licensee did sedate Anubis and cut back the nails. Excessive nail growth can be uncomfortable and cause injury to the animals. Anubis' condition must be addressed by the attending veterinarian to alleviate his discomfort and appropriate treatment provided. If the condition is related to long nails a program for monitoring and trimming of the nails must be implemented to ensure the health and well-being of the wolf.

FEEDING.

The floor and walls in the commissary are dirty. Along the bottom of the walls, in the corners, behind the refrigerators, and under the shelves, there are accumulations of dirt and debris. There are areas under and around the refrigerators, the tables and shelving with dried up dark brown dirty residue. The accumulations of dirt, debris and dried residue may harbor bacteria and attract unwanted insects and vermin, which could contaminate the food stored and prepared here.

There are soaps, cleaning supplies and other items sitting on shelves over the food preparation tables. These items may spill or drop into food being prepared below contaminating it.

Eating contaminated food would be hazardous to the health of the animals. The cleaning supplies and other items should be stored safely and away from food preparation areas. The commissary where food is stored and prepared must be cleaned more thoroughly to prevent the contamination of food and protect the well-being of the animals.
