Housing facilities, general.

An electrical cord for a heating element was connected to an extension cord and hanging within the outdoor primary enclosure for 2 adult Black-and-White Ruffed Lemurs. A facility representative stated the heating element is not in use and the cord was not plugged in during inspection. Failure to maintain structurally sound housing facilities for nonhuman primates that protect them from injury, such as having electrical cords within reach, may result in adverse events such as electrocution or strangulation. Exhibitors must design and construct housing facilities that are structurally sound for the species of nonhuman primates housed and protect them from injury.

Correct by 28 November 2024.

This inspection and exit interview were conducted with a facility representative.
