3.6(a)(2)(i)

Primary enclosures.

Two separate primary enclosures each housing one Siberian Husky puppy both have excessive rust on the front door and door frames of each enclosure. This rust does not allow these surfaces to be readily cleaned and sanitized. Surfaces that can not be properly cleaned and sanitized can be a health risk for the animals contained in the enclosures as they can allow for disease transmission. These rusting areas must be replaced or resurfaced to allow for effective cleaning and sanitization.

Correct by: 8-9-2023.

3.6(c)(1)(i)

Primary enclosures.

Two separate primary enclosures each housing one Siberian Husky puppy both measure 26 X 21 inches. Each dog measures approximately 18 inches from the base of its tail to the tip of its nose. These dogs require four square feet be provided by their primary enclosures. The enclosures provide 3.8 square feet. These puppies need to be housed in enclosures that provide the minimum amount of floor space that they require. Inadequate space may have a detrimental effect on the animal's ability to make normal postural and social adjustments with adequate freedom of movement.

Correct by: 8-8-2023.

This inspection and exit interview were conducted with a facility representative.
