Watering.

One adult Guinea Pig housed at the facility did not have access to water. When inspectors touched the water bottle to see if water was present the animal was vocalizing and attempting to drink from the empty bottle. The water bottle provided to the animal was completely empty. The facility representative was asked by inspectors to provide water to the animal. The Guinea pig drank voraciously even while the water bottle was being placed onto the side of the enclosure and manipulated by the facility representative. The Guinea pig drank excessively for approximately 2 minutes and 28 seconds.

One juvenile African crested porcupine housed at the facility did not have access to water. The facility representative stated that the animals are offered water around noon each day. The facility representative was asked by the inspectors to provide water to the animal. The juvenile African Crested porcupine was found to be excessively thirsty. The animal drank voraciously for approximately 1 minute and 20 seconds and only stopping when being disturbed by human activity in the room. The porcupine knocked over the water bowl and continued drinking the spilled water from the floor of the enclosure.

The eagerness and length of time spent consuming water when offered indicates that the animals are extremely thirsty, and that the current schedule for watering is not sufficient to meet the animals' basic needs. Frequency of watering shall consider age, species, condition, size, and type of the animal. The facility must provide water as often as necessary for the health and comfort of the animals.
