Watering.

There were two guinea pigs, housed in separate cages, that had a mild-moderate amount of green algae-like substance growing along the inside of their plastic water bottles that were affixed to their cages. Lack of proper sanitization of the water bottles could allow for harmful organisms to grow, which could negatively impact the health and well-being of the animals. All watering receptacles must be sanitized when dirty. All water receptacles shall be sanitized when dirty and at least once every 2 weeks.
