2.40(b)(2)

ATTENDING VETERINARIAN AND ADEQUATE VETERINARY CARE (DEALERS AND EXHIBITORS).

While there was a written program of veterinary care (PVC), it was broad and did not adequately provided the appropriate methods of proper health care. Rather, the methods were listed for all species present and may not have applied to them all. In addition, the rabbits were not included in the PVC. Failure to provide an adequate program of preventative, routine and emergency veterinary care for the species housed can jeopardize the health of the animals.

Exhibitors shall establish and maintain programs of adequate veterinary care that include the use of appropriate methods to prevent, control, diagnose, and treat diseases and injuries, and the availability of emergency, weekend, and holiday care.

CLASSIFICATION AND SEPARATION.

A rabbits is being housed in an enclosure with other farm animals. Housing rabbits with other species may affect their health and well-being and increase their risk of injury.

The facility should ensure the rabbits are not housed in the same primary enclosure with any other species.

3.130

WATERING.

Two automatic water receptacles within the primary enclosure housing farm animals were corroded. One of the water receptacles also had an algae-like growth. Failure to maintain such receptacles prevents proper sanitation and the provision of potable water to the animals, which may adversely affect their health and welfare.

A system must be utilized for monitoring the condition of water receptacles and the maintenance thereof to keep
