Space requirements.

A young female Patagonian Cavy was being housed in a wire dog crate in the gift shop. The Cavy did not have adequate space to move around and make normal postural adjustments. She could only take 2-3 steps before having to turn around and she could not move around without knocking her food and water bowl over. Limited space and range of movement can create mental stress, debility, and abnormal behavior patterns. Enclosures shall be constructed and maintained so as to provide sufficient space to allow each animal to make normal postural and social adjustments with adequate freedom of movement. Watering.

The young female Patagonian Cavy housed in a dog crate in the gift shop area did not have access to water at the time of inspection. Both the water bottle attached to the side and the bowl in the cage were empty. When the bowl was filled with water, she drank for longer than a minute. Water is essential to life and lack of water can lead to excessive thirst and suffering. Water must be provided as often as necessary to provide for the health and comfort of the animal. Corrected at the time of inspection.

This inspection and exit interview were conducted with the owner.
