3.87(a)(3)

Primary enclosures used to transport nonhuman primates.

On June 24, 2024, 3 capuchins and 2 spider monkeys were transported in enclosures that allowed them to reach their hands and arms outside of their enclosures. If allowed to reach outside of their enclosures, primates can manipulate locking mechanisms, grab items that could pose a danger to their health, or lead to crush injuries if the cage shifts during transit. The enclosure must securely contain the primate(s) at all times so that they cannot put any body part outside the enclosure that could result in injury to the animal or nearby persons. Correct by 7/5/24 by ensuring the primates cannot reach outside of their transport enclosures while in transit.

3.87(d)(1)

Primary enclosures used to transport nonhuman primates.

Two adult and 1 juvenile capuchin were transported in a single large enclosure for several hours on June 24, 2024. The 3 capuchins are "troopmates" but are not related or otherwise a family group. Transportation can be stressful and primates may behave in manner considered abnormal for them, including displaying aggressive or protective behavior, ganging up on an individual and causing them harm. Only one live nonhuman primate may be transported in a primary enclosure unless they are a mother with nursing infant, a bonded male-female pair with or without offspring, or a compatible pair of juveniles of the same species. Correct by 7/5/24 by ensuring primates are singly housed when transported unless they meet one of the listed exceptions.
