ATTENDING VETERINARIAN AND ADEQUATE VETERINARY CARE (DEALERS AND EXHIBITORS).

Four bottles of outdated medications including vaccines and antibiotics were noted in the refrigerator. Medications had been expired from approximately one month to a year. These medications were being stored for potential treatment of regulated species. Use of outdated medications can contribute to illness or cause harm in animals as compounds can become ineffective or deteriorate with time. Appropriate methods, including administration of in-date medications, must be used to prevent, control, and treat diseases and injuries of regulated animals.

Item was corrected immediately.
