Environment enhancement to promote psychological well-being.

The facility lacks a written environmental enhancement plan for its primates. Primates may become psychologically distressed when not provided adequate enrichment. Exhibitors must develop, document, and follow an appropriate plan for environment enhancement, as directed by the attending veterinarian. The plan must address social grouping, environmental enrichment, special considerations, such as infants and juveniles, individually housed primates, and any primates showing signs of psychological distress. Correct by 1/2/26.

This inspection and exit interview were conducted with a facility representative.
