The required acquisition and disposition records and were not available for review and examination by the APHIS officials for this inspection.

During the inspection, the facility representative's husband stated there were no animals at the site for this registration. There were records available for review, but the facility representative didn't know how to access them, stating his wife oversees records management. The facility representative stated their wife would return to the facility today and would be able to email the records to APHIS officials. APHIS officials also attempted to contact the second facility representative during the inspection via phone, but did not hear back. Another attempt was made via email, requesting the required records by Friday, December 12th, 2025 to complete the remainder of the inspection. Some records were submitted, but subsequent acquisition and disposition records were not provided by the registrant until three days after the required date of submission. These records conflicted the information provided to APHIS officials during the inspection regarding the acquisition of twelve sugar gliders. No disposition records for these animals were provided.

Review of paperwork at a facility ensures they are operating as intended to ensure the welfare of the animals used and housed by the facility, as well as animals transported or otherwise in his or her possession or under his or her control in regulated activities. The facility shall ensure that records required by the Animal Welfare Act (AWA) and the regulations are available for APHIS officials to review on all inspections.
