Water quality.

At the time of inspection, water quality records for the nine California sea lions showed that the pH and chlorine levels were not tested on January 26th and 28th, 2026. Failure to test pH and chlorine levels daily can negatively impact the health and well-being of the animals, as well as overall water quality, resulting in possible ocular, skin, and respiratory irritation and bacterial proliferation. Water samples shall be taken and tested at least weekly for coliform count and at least daily for pH and any chemical additives (e.g., chlorine and copper) that are added to the water to maintain water quality standards.
