Institutional Animal Care and Use Committee (IACUC).

While performing record review, it was discovered that the Institutional Animal Care and Use Committee (IACUC) failed to review the program for humane care and use of animals when required in June and December 2025. This was confirmed by a facility representative. Failure to complete the semiannual program review as required by the Animal Welfare Act may delay the identification and correction of program deficiencies, welfare concerns, discrepancies, or other issues that could negatively impact the health and well-being of animals covered under the program. With respect to activities involving animals, the IACUC, as an agent of the research facility, must review, at least once every six months, the research facility's program for humane care and use of animals, using title 9, chapter I, subchapter A – Animal Welfare, as a basis for evaluation.

Annual report.

While performing record review it was discovered that the facility did not complete and submit an annual report to the Deputy Administrator since October 2024. This was confirmed by a facility representative. Failure to complete and submit the annual report can negatively impact the health and well-being of the animals by undermining institutional and regulatory oversight, which can result in inadequate identification and correction of welfare concerns. Each reporting facility shall submit an annual report to the Deputy Administrator on or before December 1 of each calendar year. The report shall cover the previous Federal fiscal year.
