Handling of animals.

During public exhibition, many parakeets come dangerously close to people's feet as they look for food on the floor and under the benches where people are seated. The aviary is designed to allow the public to come in and have an interactive experience with the parakeets, feeding them from hand-held plates that contain seed provided by the facility. There are about 130 parakeets in the enclosure. People are seated on benches as they feed the birds. Even though only a small amount of seed falls on the floor during feeding, it is enough to cause large numbers of birds to forage around people's feet and the surrounding floor area. Guests are instructed to keep their feet and heels on the floor and shuffle as they walk in and out of the enclosure. Despite these instructions, the inspector observed guests with heels raised in two groups, and one parakeet passed under the raised heel of one of the guests. The presence of birds on the floor around people's feet has resulted in the deaths of at least 4 birds at his facility in the last two years from being stepped on or things being dropped on them. These deaths were cited on previous inspection reports. During public exhibition, care must be taken so that there is minimal risk of harm to the birds with sufficient distance and/or barriers between the birds and the general viewing public to assure the safety of animals.

This inspection and exit interview were conducted with a facility representative.
